A dreamer, a wonderer—“une petite Antigone”

Daughter of women who lived in the past
A lover of learning, expression, and mostly just life

One who feels cheated without the sun, the wind, or a quiet place for thought

Who needs to write, to tell, and sometimes speak her mind

Who fears not the silence, the future, nor where sent

And gives what she has—a smile, and hour, but not what she can’t Who’d like to see “Abuelita Calistra,” Rafael, and the rest of the fam.

Resident of Provo for now—and made of Guerrero as well as
